MSCA domain	Social Sciences and Humanities (SOC)
Research focus area	German linguistics – migration studies – narrative analysis – conversation analysis
Department	Department of Modern Languages and Culture - DLCM
Short description of the department/ laboratory/ research group	On the basis of the analysis of the experiences of minors who in the first half of the 20th century were forced to emigrate from Germany and from the countries annexed to the Reich, we intend to develop an empirical cognitive approach to the forced migration of minors, and to the related dynamics of acculturation and language learning in the 21st century. The concept of voice (Blommaert 2005) is central to this task, in order to give expression to the experiences and emotions lived at the time of emigration and narrated retrospectively decades later. The analysis aims to cross-reference data from different sources in order to ensure a plural perspective. Starting point are two collections of German-language interviews with people who were forced to leave their original home country in the 1930s: the so-called Israelkorpus, collected in Israel between 1989 and 2019 (Betten 2013), which contains interviews with people who emigrated to

	Palestine, and the corpus FEGB (Flight and Emigration to Great Britain), collected in 2017 (Thüne 2019), consisting largely of people who emigrated with the Kindertransport action. The corpora are stored at the Archive for spoken German (AGD). The project plans to add to these other data, both audio and textual, related to child and youth emigration to Belgium, France and Sweden (Maier - Wolthausen 2021), as well as in relation to migration from Poland (Craig -Norton 2012). The research aims at identifying the elements required to develop a narrative cartography (Pearce 2008) of experiences related to forced migration, in particular traumas and key memories to processes of acculturation and learning new languages. Methodologically the research is situated within the qualitative approach, integrated by mixed methods approaches (Steen &amp; Liedtke 2019; Flinz &amp; Ruppenhofer 2021). The analyses will attempt to combine a wide range of approaches, making use of the category of 'chronotope' (Bakhtin 1979); underlying both linguistic and literary analyses are memory studies (Rothberg 2009). The 'mapping' envisages an annotation of the 'places' and 'spaces' (Flinz &amp; Ruppenhofer 2021) recurring in the corpus (audio interviews and texts, both autobiographical and (auto)fictional), as well as the experiences related to them. Annotation will be carried out through the MAXQDA software (Kuckartz &amp; Rädiker 2019). The identification of the chronotopes in the narratives under investigation, the categorisation of the places and experiences connected to them, the articulation of the voice and their collation will result in 'narrative threads' from which to filter the

Research focus area	The research focus area will be the diffusion in Europe and in Italy of Geoffrey of Vinsauf's "Poetria nova", through the study and critical edition of the ancient commentaries (13th - 15th century) on it: a great part of the work will be focused on the relationship between the "Poetria nova" and the 'ars dictaminis'. Some of the objectives are: a) definition of the specific cultural environments in which Geoffrey's work was read and commented on in Europe and in Italy; b) a better knowledge of the early commentaries on the "Poetria nova" and of their authors and sources. The methodology of work will be based on a multidisciplinary approach, that will involve several fields: digital humanities, philology, codicology, palaeography, linguistic, history.
Department	Department of Law
Short description of the department/ laboratory/research group	The MSC fellow will find in Genoa the ideal place to carry on his research. The supervisor, Domenico Losappio, is one of the few scholars that have dedicated a large number of articles and critical editions to the commentaries on the "Poetria nova" (Guizzardo da Bologna, Bartholomew of San Concordio, Pace of Ferrara, Benedict of Cividale).

	He works with some experts of medieval and classical Latin literature and philology, and of digital humanities, who will represent a great support for the fellow. The Department of Antiquities, Philosophy, History (DAFIST) will offer a rich library that will be available alongside other important libraries in Genoa like the “Biblioteca Universitaria” and the “Biblioteca Berio”. The fellow will also find important scientific centers of studies on Latin, such as the Interuniversity center “SCientific Literature in LAtin” (SCILLA).

Short description of the department/laboratory/research group	The philosophy of experiential artifacts is a new area of inquiry in which the relationship between art and technology can be properly studied, thereby offering a new conceptual toolbox for historical and empirical research. This will be done through a fourfold methodology in which aesthetics and the philosophy of mind analyze the experiences that experiential artifacts are meant to trigger, while metaphysics and the philosophy of technology investigate the structure in virtue of which they perform this function. We collaborate with different national or foreign Universities and research institutions, and we currently involved in two research national projects activated by the National Recovery and Resilience Plan. Within our teaching, research, and PhD activities we are used to organising seminars, webinars, and conferences. The project concerns the topic of the Intangible Cultural Heritage in order to carry out research about the national, european and international regulations of the Intangible Cultural Heritage itself: such as the two UNESCO Conventions signed in Paris in 2003 and in 2005 (the Convention for the Safeguarding of the Intangible Cultural Heritage and the Convention on the Protection and Promotion of the Diversity of Cultural Expressions), as well as the Council of Europe Convention on the Value of Cultural Heritage for Society, adopted in Faro in 2005, but also the Italian, the Spanish and the French rules. The ultimate goal of this study is to analyse and understand the impact of those regulations in order to achieve their harmonization.
